VICTIM CONTACT RATE –KPI INDICATOR

Since some victims may receive both a letter and a call, which can inflate numbers inaccurately, I propose an alternative approach that focuses on how quickly and consistently victims are contacted after a report is made. This method of measuring the KPI is also more precise for potential reporting to Blueprint for Safety and DOJ Grants in the future.

Attempted contact was made with 98% of victims eligible for follow-up services during February, ensuring nearly all victims were provided information about available advocacy and safety planning resources.
